According to William Tiller, a Stanford physicist, the Tiller-Einstein model describes two fundamentally different kinds of energy (VM, p. 15):

- Electromagnetic energy functions in a positive space/time universe and is bound by the laws limiting the speed of light;
- Magnetoelectric energy or "life force energy" works in a negative space/time where faster than light movement is possible.

The kind of energy involved in vibrational medicine is this second energy.

How does this magnetoelectric or "life force energy work?" Imagine the physical body imbedded in an interwoven network of energy fields, all in dynamic equilibrium with it. Each energy field or system is physically superimposed upon the others in the same physical space. The reason they all can occupy the same space and not interfere with each other is because they vibrate at different frequencies, just as all the different television and radio frequencies do. The energy fields that surround the physical body are called the "subtle energy creates the resulting health or dis-ease of the physical body. The higher frequency etheric body contains the chakras that feed all the organ systems and other cells in the physical body. It also provides the "holographic energy template" with information to guide cellular growth of the physical body, the spatial placement of limbs and organs for the fetus, as well as the cellular repair of the adult body. It works together with the RNA and DNA of cellular genetics. Channels of subtle energetic information move between the etheric and physical body structures and systems, similar to the way that chemicals and nerve impulses handle communication on a physical level.

The emotional or astral body (which has an even higher vibrational level than the physical or etheric bodies) surrounds and interpenetrates both. As the seat of emotions, the astral body is the subtle energy connection to the health of the physical body. The chakras are transmitters and receivers of emotional energy as it cascades down to the etheric and then the physical bodies. As Gerber says, "the esoteric literature describes the astral as the seat of our sensual appetites and desires, longings, moods, feelings, appetites and fears.” The emotional thought forms of the astral body feed into the limbic system within the brain and its neural activity, which in turn has an impact on the personality. The three energy bodies discussed so far have been validated by scientific study.

As described in esoteric literature, the mental body is the “vehicle through which the self manifests and expresses the concrete intellect.” It is focused on the “creation and transmission of concrete thoughts and ideas to the brain, for their expression and manifestation upon the physical plane.” The linkages are focused on the major endocrine and nervous centers in the physical as well as the emotional and etheric bodies. Since this body has thought forms that are purely mental concepts, healing at the mental level will be much more powerful than at either the emotional or etheric levels because of the cascading impact on the three lower bodies.

The spiritual, or causal body, is often called the Higher Self. It has a higher frequency than other bodies and is focused on the essence of “abstract ideas and concepts.” The causal body expands beyond the individual and thus, has a greater power to heal all the lower bodies as the subtle energy “ratchets” down to the physical. Even though there are other bodies at even higher frequencies or vibrations, we will focus here on the bodies mentioned above.

Healing in this multidimensional energy system: As Gerber says, “The energetic fields of healers fit Tiller’s criteria for negative space/time substance or magnetoelectric energy...demonstrate certain qualitative similarities to magnetic fields...have negative entropic properties, i.e., the ability to reassemble disordered molecules.” Vibrational medicine healers create a magnetoelectric field, or life force energy, that feeds into one or more of the bodies in the multidimensional energy system to move it in the direction of good health, according to the specific bodies’ or systems’ guidelines. As Quantum Touch healers say, the energy field raises the vibration of the cells; as a result, they have a “higher intelligence” and can do what they were designed to do, namely, to heal the body. Imagine the overlapping energy fields, with connections to each other absorbing energy from some vibrational healing source and then cascading that energy through the hierarchical system from the spiritual, mental, emotional, and etheric bodies, down to the physical body.
